To your success,

Christopher Howard

If you were introduced to a quick effective technique to create change in your life instantly, in your finances, health, relationships, and career, would you try it?

Christopher Howard, an internationally acclaimed expert in accelerated change technologies and leadership, has made a career out of guiding people to immediately transform ineffective thoughts and behaviors into adaptable, successful ones that allow them to create the results they want in their lives.

Chris Howard's unique Subconscious Reprogramming technologies are the next generation of tools for achievement. They are a hybrid science grown out of and improving on several models dating back to earlier last century. What started with Korzybski's general semantics in the 1930's, was further developed by Bandler and Grinder in the early 70's into Neuro-Linguistic Programming or NLP. Since then the field was popularized in the 80s by the likes of Tony Robbins, and now Howard brings these cutting edge tools into their fourth generation, adding his unique understanding of hypnosis and quantum physics to create change in a fraction of the time it has taken in the past.

"Think of the human brain as being the most fantastic biocomputer ever created," explains Chris, who has personally led, managed, launched or turned around numerous organizations and businesses in the past decade. "But it's not user friendly. The technologies we teach are kind of like a Users Guide. Installing a new system, such as the mindset of someone like Gandhi, for example, is like upgrading your software system."

In his courses, Chris uses Subconscious Reprogramming to instigate instant change on a subconscious level.

"Instead of looking only at therapists as a source to model, I began looking to the greatest spiritual, world and business leaders of all time, such as Nelson Mandela, Gandhi, and Richard Branson (the mastermind behind Virgin Records and Virgin Airlines), to name a few."

From this research Chris created his Subconscious Reprogramming Technologies. They are tools that allow you to create your life the way that you want by expanding your self-concept and expanding the results that you are able to produce in any context.

"Through the technique of Cognitive Profiling, we can look at any result that anybody has ever produced and replicate that result in a fraction of the time," explains Chris.

So how does it work? Let's say somebody wants to become a multi-billionaire or super success, and they choose Oprah Winfrey as their role model. "Her success is the result of a superior mindset," says Chris. "The question then becomes; "How can we emulate and install her psychology into somebody else?" All of Oprah's qualities, her values, attitudes, beliefs, the decisions she's made, how she sees people, and the strategies she uses to produce the results she wants, are analyzed and broken down. "One of Oprah's main driving forces is to be loved," explains Howard. "We can take that and then analyze the strategies she used to run that driving force. Part of what this technology does is allowing us to break things down into small enough parts to make them transferable."

The manner in which Cognitive Re-imprinting transfers such parts to an individual includes adjusting their values and beliefs in a way that serves their highest potential. "We all have certain ways we code and store information in our minds and bodies. A 'value' is simply what is important to you, and values will largely shape your world," elaborates Howard. "A 'belief' is simply a feeling of certainty about something, but it's not necessarily true. Using Results Technologies, we can shift the way you store values and beliefs in you body, so you can change what's important to you at the subconscious level, therefore releasing subconscious blocks to your success."

And going back to the computer analogy, "If all you have is poverty or lousy relationships punched into your search engine, that's all that will come up. We teach people how to gain control of those things, so that they can punch wealth and harmony in instead, and then that will appear in their lives."

During the 30 day Wealth Propulsion Challenge, people focus on the financial pain or wealth goals. Chris Howard will help them to apply accelerated technologies to break through any blocks and apply his next generation tools. "It's a wonderful course to figure out what subconscious factors are controlling one's life, and how they can break through these obstacles once and for all," says Chris.

A great example of the success of the techniques taught by Chris is exemplified by an artist who came to a weekend seminar. "She decided to focus on finances first," says Howard. "She was making $70,000.00 a year at the time. What she learned was that one of her beliefs was that money and happiness didn't go hand in hand. During the training she released this and other limiting decisions through a regression type of technique. Within a year and a half after attending our program, she is now making $180,000.00 a year and working less. She's also attended an additional week long program, lost over 50 pounds, and has gotten her ideal relationship as well.

Chris maintains that there are two things that determine our success in life: 1) our internal communication, which is how and what we communicate inside our minds and bodies (our thoughts), and 2) our external communication, which is the manner in which we communicate with others. "No one who produces major results in the world has done so unless it has been with and through other people," emphasizes Chris.

"Subconscious Reprogramming techniques enable us to change internal and external communication, focus on leadership and groups, and show people how to develop the ability to be influential in their own lives."

An important aspect of Chris's training is that he has developed a system where people not only learn the tools for change, but are forced to apply them.

Although the Subconscious Reprogramming technologies are largely psychologically oriented, Chris feels there is a strong spiritual aspect to what he does. "Who we really are is love and light and goodness, and what prevents us from tapping into that are, negative emotions and limiting decisions. So when we release those things in our programs, we then become more of who we really are. I see the use of Subconscious Reprogramming in my courses as a means of getting closer to our spiritual nature.

People are blown away by the personal transformation they get through this course and afterwards. Some people call us for weeks, months and even years later telling us how much their lives have changed. From an instructor's viewpoint, what could be more fulfilling than that?"

"Education's purpose is to replace an empty mind with an open one."
